Looking for the Gulf Motel (title poem) A few years ago I went to Marco Island wanting to revisit my childhood memories of vacationing there. But after decades of development, I hardly recognized the place. It was as if “my” Marco Island—and part of me—had disappeared. I found myself filled with the same kind of longing and nostalgia that my parents had for their lost Cuba.

Looking for the Gulf Motel (title poem) - Richard Blanco

One was this year's inaugural poet, Richard Blanco. After reading Blanco's most recent book, Looking for The Gulf Motel, I am struck by how this poet moves beyond the merely self-referential into the truest and hardest work a memoirist can do—plumbing both the depths and the reliability of memory itself. Take, for instance, the haunting refrain from Blanco's title poem, “ There should be nothing here I don't remember....”

What Richard Blanco's Looking for the Gulf Motel Taught Me About Identity. January 20, 2016. February 8, 2016. As I lay curled up in an armchair reading Richard Blanco's third book Looking for the Gulf Motel, I was struck by his diversity and approach. In my personal life, when my writing suddenly shifted towards interactions with my father and references to Mexican culture- I housed a fear that I would be pigeon holed.
